Are you interested in talking about your perceptions of compulsory treatment for alcohol dependence?

Have your voice heard

Researchers from the University of New South Wales are conducting face-to-face focus groups with family members, friends, loved ones and those with experience of alcohol problems. The focus groups will run for approximately 2-hours and will be conveniently located in Melbourne CBD.

They are looking for people who are:

- Interested in discussing compulsory treatment for alcohol dependence.
- Have experience with alcohol problems – either as someone with a family member, friend, loved one who has had an alcohol problem, or those with experience of alcohol problems.
- Aged 18 years or older.
